

An Evening of Conversation for
Young Professional Women

“Social Entrepreneurship in America: Women’s Work Since 1780”

Guest speaker: Dr. Claire J. Gaudiani
Adjunct Professor
The Wagner School of Public Service
NYU

From the birth of our nation women have created social entrepreneurship using the same skills and energy associated with the famous capitalists of the industrial revolution. Women’s audacious goals were inventing systems that made the real promises of “...Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness” closer to reality for all.

Join us for an informative and inspiring evening as Claire shares stories from her newest book and introduces the heroines of American philanthropy who invented the non-profit sector and still live as engines of social change. Come and see where you might fit in!

Wednesday, October 21, 2009, 7:30 pm

Wine and cheese reception to follow.

Murray Hill Institute
243 Lexington Avenue (NE corner of 34th St. and Lexington), NYC

Fee: $10 per person; students free

Because of limited seating, we can only honor the first 35 women who RSVP.
Please reply to: info@murrayhillinstitute.org.

Claire Gaudiani is Adjunct Professor at the Robert Wagner School of Public Service at NYU. She teaches on philanthropy and social entrepreneurship. She was president of Connecticut College for 13 years and is the author of several books: The Greater Good: How Philanthropy Drives the American Economy and Can Save Capitalism, Generosity Rules, and soon to be published, Social Entrepreneurship in America: Land of Our Mothers’ Pride.